Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Monday 12 Apr 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Sunny spells and showers, wintry at first.

Today:
Southern parts of England and much of Wales starting rather cloudy with outbreaks of rain, sleet and some snow, this clearing through the morning, to leave sunny intervals and scattered showers. Elsewhere, sunny periods and isolated wintry showers.

Tonight:
Clear periods and a fairly widespread frost, although more patchy in the south and west, where some mist and fog will form later in the night.

Tuesday:
Mostly dry with sunny spells in the morning after mist and fog patches clear, then a scattering of showers developing during the afternoon. Less cold than recently.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
A few showers are possible at times, but most places will be mainly dry with sunny or clear spells, light winds and overnight frosts.
